

The child sex trafficking law does not apply to buyers, and penalties under the buyer-applicable commercial sexual exploitation of children (CSEC) laws do not reflect the seriousness of those offenses. Further, state law does not prohibit the criminalization of minors for prostitution, and specialized services are only available through an alternative juvenile justice process.

Criminalization of Domestic Minor Sex Trafficking

New York criminalizes child sex trafficking without requiring proof of force, fraud, or coercion when the victim is a minor. New York's CSEC laws include: "patronizing a person for prostitution" in the first and second degree, "patronizing a person for prostitution in a school zone," aggravated patronizing a minor for prostitution" in the first, second, and third degree, "promoting prostitution in a school zone," "promoting prostitution" in the first, second, and third degree, "compelling prostitution," "use of a child in a sexual performance," and "luring a child." New York's prostitution and loitering statutes do not refer to the child sex trafficking statute to acknowledge the intersection of prostitution with trafficking victimization. New York's racketeering statute includes child sex trafficking and CSEC offenses as predicate acts.

Criminal Provisions for Demand

The child sex trafficking law does not prohibit purchasing commercial sex with minors, leaving buyers subject only to a few state CSEC laws. "Patronizing a person for prostitution" distinguishes between soliciting sex with adults versus minors under 15, with penalties varying based on the age of the minor; however, defendants may assert a mistake of age defense to these crimes. Buyers convicted under the applicable CSEC offenses face penalties ranging from 1–25 years imprisonment and fines up to $5,000. Buyers who use the Internet to purchase sex acts with a minor could be prosecuted under "disseminating indecent material to minors in the first degree." Buyers may be required to pay restitution and face forfeiture of assets constituting the proceeds or instrumentality of any crime. Buyers are required to register as sex offenders if convicted of possessing child sexual abuse material (CSAM) or any degree of "patronizing a prostitute" when a minor under 17 is involved.

Criminal Provisions for Traffickers

Convictions for "sex trafficking of a child," "compelling prostitution" of one less than 18 by force, fraud, or coercion, or "promoting prostitution in the first degree" are felonies punishable by 1–25 years imprisonment. "Promoting prostitution in the second degree" or "use of a child [under 16] in a sexual performance" are felonies punishable by 1–15 years imprisonment, whereas "promoting prostitution in the third degree" is a felony punishable by up to 7 years imprisonment. All felony sentences may include fines up to $5,000 or "double the amount of the defendant's gain from the commission of the crime," whichever is higher, and victim restitution may be ordered. Traffickers may face forfeiture of all proceeds and instrumentalities of a felony, and forfeiture of all equipment used to create CSAM is mandatory. New York's law that prohibits the dissemination of indecent material to minors (although not specifically commercial) could be used to prosecute the growing number of traffickers using the Internet to commit their crimes. Traffickers are required to register as sex offenders for convictions of child sex trafficking, creating CSAM, and some CSEC offenses. Convictions for child sex trafficking or CSEC offenses are not included as grounds for terminating parental rights.

Criminal Provisions for Facilitators

The child sex trafficking law includes profiting from prostitution. Facilitators can also be charged with certain CSEC offenses. Conduct amounting to aiding or facilitating in an act or enterprise of prostitution of a minor under 19 is a felony with varying penalties based on the age of the victim: a conviction is punishable by 1–25 years imprisonment if the victim is under 13, or 1–15 years if 13–18. Additionally, “promoting prostitution in the third degree” addresses sex tourism and includes the crime of controlling or owning a business selling travel for the purpose of prostitution. Convictions of “promoting prostitution in the third degree” and “promoting sexual performance of a minor” under 17 are felonies punishable by up to 7 years imprisonment. All felonies are punishable with possible fines up to $5,000 or “double the amount of the defendant’s gain from the commission of the crime,” whichever is higher. For a felony conviction, facilitators may be required to pay restitution and forfeit all proceeds gained from commission of the felony. Facilitators also face mandatory criminal forfeiture of all equipment used to manufacture or distribute CSAM.

Protective Provisions for the Child Victims

Not all commercially sexually exploited children are identifiable as child sex trafficking victims; the trafficking offense is not applicable to buyers and requires third party control. “Sex trafficking of a child” does not prohibit a defense based on the willingness of the minor to engage in the commercial sex act. Prostitution laws apply to minors under 18, meaning exploited youth may face criminalization for commercial sex acts committed as a result of their victimization. However, a minor under 16 is presumed to be a victim of a severe form of trafficking. Upon a motion, the court may substitute a “person in need of supervision” (PINS) petition for the delinquency petition. A minor victim aged 16 or 17 who is arrested for prostitution or loitering may have the criminal charges converted to a PINS proceeding as long as a guilty plea has not been entered. Minor victims may be referred to specialized services, including placement in safe houses staffed by specially trained advocates. However, if the CSEC victim is unwilling to cooperate with specialized services, the delinquency proceedings will continue. For purposes of child welfare intervention, the definition of abused child includes victims of child sex trafficking, CSEC, and CSAM offenses. The definition of “person legally responsible” includes any “person responsible for the child’s care at the relevant time” but requires presence in the household, which may create a barrier to child welfare intervention. Child sex trafficking victims who suffer physical, mental, or emotional injury are provided exceptions to crime victims’ compensation prompt reporting requirements. Victim-friendly criminal justice procedures are limited. Only children under 14 may testify via closed-circuit television, and the “rape shield” law, which reduces the trauma of cross-examination for testifying victims, does not specifically extend to CSEC victims. Child victims of CSEC offenses are eligible to receive psychosocial and advocacy support services. New York law does not provide a mechanism for minors to vacate delinquency adjudications related to trafficking victimization, and juvenile records may only be sealed after a minor turns 16. Victim restitution for personal injury may be ordered, and child sex trafficking victims may bring civil actions for damages. Victims of child sex trafficking and CSEC are afforded an extended statute of limitations for civil and criminal actions.

Criminal Justice Tools for Investigation and Prosecution

Training or development of training materials for law enforcement on sex trafficking is not statutorily mandated or authorized, but the social services commissioner is authorized to contract with NGOs experienced in working with CSEC victims to train law enforcement. Single party consent to audiotaping is allowed, and wiretapping is authorized for investigations of child sex trafficking and “promoting prostitution” in the first, second, and third degree. No law expressly authorizes the use of the Internet by law enforcement to investigate cases of child sex trafficking or prohibits an offender from raising a defense based on the use of a law enforcement decoy posing as a minor in an investigation for the buying and selling of sex acts with a child. New York maintains a Statewide Central Register for Missing Children, and state law requires reporting of closed missing children cases.
