

Policy Goal

Wiretapping is an available tool to investigate domestic minor sex trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children (CSEC).

A serious challenge in any prosecution of domestic minor sex trafficking is producing corroborating evidence at trial. Recorded phone conversations or text messages between a victim and a buyer or trafficker are important incriminating pieces of evidence. Wiretapping is largely permitted in cases of murder, arson, and terrorism and is often permitted for other serious felonies involving danger to life or limb. Child sex trafficking and CSEC should be recognized as serious crimes involving these dangers to a child, therefore necessitating wiretapping as an investigative tool. States should carve out an exemption for investigations of sex trafficking and CSEC cases in their wiretapping laws to allow law enforcement officers to investigate and obtain evidence to substantiate their cases against buyers and traffickers while protecting victims who have a difficult time testifying. This investigative tool will lead to an increase in arrests and better prosecutions and will help to alleviate reliance on the child victim-witness' testimony.
